Work is incorrectly or not fully cited. Summary includes title of article, where and when published, and author. Title of book or magazine is underlined. Title of article or story is in quotes. Now that we have identified the main ideas and sorted through the details, it is time to plan a summary of this article using a graphic organizer and to then write final copies. We use the same graphic organizer as in a previous lesson and the summary is graded accorded to the same rubric before, too. Familiarity makes the work easier. Do not forget to review the rubric so that students are aware of the grading criteria before starting the assessment. The article itself, the graphic organizer for the summary and the final copy of the summary are all to be passed in together along with the rubric. This will give you an accurate picture of how the student approached the assignment, insight into their level of understanding and will help you locate places where the student's thinking took a wrong turn, as well as to ...
