Each general pediatrics examination adheres to a blueprint, also known as a content outline. The outline, which is developed by a committee of pediatricians and educators, defines the categories — and the percentage of questions assigned to each category — contained in each certification exam. The GP Content Outline was revised in 2016, and beginning September 1, 2017, all GP The content outline is not designed to be a study guide or curriculum guide. To view the content outline: Go to ABP's website; Choose your subspecialty ; Exam Development. The Adolescent Medicine Certification Program, jointly developed by ABIM, ABFM and ABP, is designed to recognize excellence among those with special expertise in this field. Content outlines are NOT designed to be study guides; however, they may help candidates identify areas in which they are weak and need additional preparation. Content outlines are dynamic works in progress. The ABP welcomes comments regarding content.
